

desirable characteristics of the ultimate products and without causing a reduction of the output of machines or production lines for the making of such products.